

Program Co-Chair, MLK Commission

Jacqueline Proctor was appointed deputy commissioner of West Virginia Bureau of Senior Service in July 2014. Her career in state government includes having held the position of deputy commissioner, West Virginia Division of Culture and History, director of communications for Governor Earl Ray Tomblin and deputy commissioner for the West Virginia Division of Tourism. A multi-faceted business/media professional with a successful track record across a diverse spectrum of disciplines over 30 years'; Proctor continues to apply her depth of experience in leadership, decision-making, communication, problem solving, coaching, collaboration, strategic planning, and budgeting. Proctor has worked extensively with business and legislative leaders, policy makers, community supporters, social and media outlets.

Currently, Proctor has administrative oversight at the Bureau of Senior Services, including assisting with the agency's fiscal operations by developing and implementing policies, plans, programs, systems and procedures in addition to directing the work of a professional and administrative staff.
