WELCOME

West Virginia State University is pleased to present the program for the Human Rights Conference “21st Century Agenda for Human Rights: Theory & Practice,” April 10-12, 2014. This event includes speakers and participants from a broad range of disciplines offering presentations, posters and panel discussions that broadly address human rights. With the active involvement of human rights advocates, we are confident that this inaugural event will be a tremendous success.

HONORED SPEAKERS

Meshea Poore, J.D.
Delegate Meshea Poore represents Kanawha County (37th District) in the W.Va. House of Delegates and is a candidate for the U.S. Congress, 2nd District in W.Va. She graduated from Howard University (B.A.) and Southern University Law Center (J.D.).

Travis Williams, J.D.
Travis Williams is a public defender in Georgia. He is well-known for tattooing the names of his clients on his back when he loses their case. He has eight losses, currently. Williams was recently featured in an HBO Documentary, “Gideon’s Army.”

Carolyn Stuart, Ph.D.
Dr. Stuart is the Director of the Herbert Henderson Office of Minority Affairs (HHOMA). She was appointed by Governor Earl Ray Tomblin. HHOMA is committed to advancing the agenda of minorities across the state of W.Va. She graduated with a Ph.D. from the Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

Greetings:

Welcome to West Virginia State University! On behalf of the University, I am so pleased you are joining WVSU’s College of Business and Social Science, in collaboration with the National Center for Human Relations, for the 2014 Inaugural Human Rights Conference!

In spite of the tremendous growth and change in our state, throughout the nation and across our global community toward equality and peaceable relations, there is still much work to be done. At West Virginia State University, we believe that respect for all humanity, as well as economic, social and cultural freedom, is of the utmost importance. To that end, I believe the focus and scope of the wonderful series of presentations and panel discussions you are about to take part in, will serve to illuminate mankind’s progress, in addition to the meaningful work we all have to accomplish.

Sincerely,

Brian O. Hemphill, Ph.D.
President

“Whenever there is a conflict between human rights and property rights, human rights must prevail.”
A BRIEF LOOK AT WEST VIRGINIA STATE UNIVERSITY’S HUMAN RIGHTS’ LEGACY

Since its inception as a land-grant institution in 1891, West Virginia State (then referred to as West Virginia Colored Institute) has remained an instrument of human rights.

Its initial objective was to provide education to freed slaves and their descendants. For generations, West Virginia State has persevered towards the march of justice while empowering lives through education and community service. On Sept. 10, 1939, West Virginia State emerged as the first of six HBCUs authorized to develop an aviation program by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Some West Virginia State students such as Jerome Edwards and John Edwards eventually became members of the elite group of African American pilots called the Tuskegee Airmen, which was a part of the United States Army Corps. The name, “Tuskegee Airmen” was used to refer to all African-Americans trained to fly and maintain combat aircraft during World War II. Among the many tragedies of World War II were the displaced refugee scholars/professionals of Jewish descent who were stripped of their credentials when the Nazis took over certain areas in Europe. In 1939, West Virginia State hired the distinguished Dr. Frederick Lehner, an Austrian who had been a prisoner of war in Siberia when the Russians overtook in World War I. Dr. Lehner came to teach German and French and became a regular member of the faculty where he remained until 1956. Both he and his wife, Stella, became United States citizens. Many Jewish displaced scholars were taken in by HBCUs and West Virginia State was no exception. Sources say that Dr. Lehner was the first European American to become a full-time faculty member at West Virginia State.

Another pivotal moment for the institution came as a result of the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court decision, Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka where racial segregation in education was prohibited.

According to Dr. Arline Thorn in West Virginia State University: A Brief History, once the ruling was interpreted to apply to higher education, the West Virginia Board of Education publicly stated that “any qualified student may be admitted to any state college under the jurisdiction of the West Virginia Board of Education”. Thus reverse discrimination had come to an end. It is important to note that a number of European American students had expressed a desire to attend West Virginia State before the formal ruling of the 1954 Supreme Court, but were forbidden by state law. Dr. Thorn states that once the ruling came down, 399 white students applied for admission to West Virginia State. Today, West Virginia State continues to prepare its students to make the world a more just society as it teaches them how to become engaged in a number of human rights issues.

TOUR OF HISTORIC MALDEN & DICKINSON SALT-WORKS

Saturday, April 12, 2014

10:30 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.

Boyhood Home of Booker T. Washington and The Great Families Who Enabled Him To Become a Great Statesman, Author and Educator

The Walking Tour of Old Malden Virginia and West Virginia is given by Larry L. Rowe

Malden resident Larry Rowe will lead a tour of the replica boyhood home of Booker T. Washington, as well as the historic 1872 African Zion Baptist Church which Washington attended after his family moved to the area following the Civil War. Both sites are part of a historic complex maintained by WVSU. The tour also includes a visit to the J.Q. Dickinson Salt-Works, operated by seventh generation salt makers who recently revived a 200-year-old family trade that yields a rare, small-batch table salt.

CALL FOR PAPERS 2015

West Virginia State University’s College of Business and Social Sciences, in collaboration with the National Center for Human Relations, is requesting paper proposals and student poster submissions for the second annual Human Rights Conference scheduled for April 2015. Students are encouraged to submit their proposals for consideration by February 2015 at WVSU.

The conference focuses on “21st Century Agenda for Human Rights Theory and Practice.” Interdisciplinary abstracts, papers, presentations, posters, roundtables, workshops and panels that directly or indirectly address the conference theme are eligible for submission. Potential topics include the following:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Business compassion</th>
<th>Economic, social, and cultural freedom</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Interfaith relations</td>
<td>Human trafficking</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Poverty and economic equality</td>
<td>Immigration</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Race relations</td>
<td>Social justice</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>International relations</td>
<td>Human rights legislation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Violence against women and children</td>
<td>Human rights and globalization</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Students should consult their academic advisor or upper-division course instructor about which topic matches their academic interests.

Poster Competition Judging:
Each poster will be judged by a panel of conference track chairs. An iPad Mini will be awarded to the 1st place student poster. Presenting a poster at the Human Rights Conference is a perfect opportunity for students to develop and have their communication skills while networking with future colleagues.

To submit an abstract, please email Dr. David Bejou at dbejou@wvstateu.edu.
